

#33: Seeing the full picture, with Victoria Johnson

Victoria Johnson is a specialist veterinary radiologist and the founder and owner of a highly regarded teleradiology business - VetCT. (vet-ct.com) She's also married to a fellow radiologist who she co-owns the business with, and mom to two young girls.

What will I learn from this episode?

- Is working as an imaging specialist for you?
- How do you maximise your chances to get into an imaging residency.
- Victoria's secret... to maintaining a healthy relationship when you're working with your significant other.
- Kids vs business ownership: can you be good at both?
- Tip from a seasoned pro on how to master working with remote teams and clients.

One thing to remember: Great business owner, great parent - Victoria's tips.

1. Get your priorities straight: Be clear that kids ALWAYS come first.
2. Learn rigorous time management techniques.
3. Create separate 'spaces' for business and family - both physical and mental, like having separate emails for work and non-work.
4. Be present when you're present.
5. Good child care is your friend.
6. Be kind to yourself- it's hard, and you can only do your best!

Victoria says:

Who is radiology for?

“You have to be person who is happy to sit in a dark room looking through large numbers of images, because that’s what the job is. You have to be very detail driven, very precise, and very patient at times. You have to have that investigative ‘get to the bottom of things’ type mind.”

Victoria’s favourite podcast:

Dead Ringers, by BBC 4: <https://www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/b007gd85/episodes/player>

More about Victoria:

<https://www.vet-ct.com/au/about/our-team/victoria-johnson/>

Vet-CT Telemedicine Hospital: <https://www.vet-ct.com/au/small-animal/telemedicine-diagnostics/>